BERLIN WALL

The midday of barriers that comprised the Berlin Wall through February 1962, as shown in CIA-RDP 68-02-3 (Continued), but were further strengthened. Changes are still being made, but most are relatively minor in character and affect the perimeter rather than the landscaping of the wall. This map shows the types of barriers along different segments of the Soviet sector border as of about 6 April 1962. The photo graphs were taken at various dates through March 1962.

FOR OFFICIAL USE ONLY

The following aerial photos show the variety in types of area through which the Berlin sector boundary passes - ranging from densely settled to sparsely settled; from primarily residential through industrial and commercial to small villages, settlements and areas of truck gardening and chicken farming. In some places the border follows canals, roads, or railways and in others crosses them. The photos are taken by looking to the east on the reverse side the portions of the border covered are indicated by brackets. At the margins of the pictures, the wall is indicated by arrows.
